At the top of the rodent pile is the CX6 which scurries across the floor with a piercing 1600DPI laser sensor. It utilizes a 2.4GHz digital connection to the computer and saddles a rubberized grip to help wrangle a wireless Speedy Gonzales to the ground, or desk for that matter.

Cordless Laser Mouse CX4 RM59

A tad less swanky than big bro, this wireless clicker is still good enough for your expensive and rustic mahogany desk at home. It even accentuates cruise control with its on-the-fly switch-able DPI resolutions between 1600/1000/800. And when you're taking a break, it concurs by heading into sleep mode to save up on juice.

Cordless Optical Mouse CO4 RM59

This is one even the late Steve Irwin would have considered a handful. The sneaky nipper can alter speeds at will, with an interchangeable DPI sensor from 800 to 1600 when the need arises and with it being free from wires, its freedom to zip between action games and office documents makes it a slippery catch.

Cordless Optical Mouse CO3 RM49

Wallet-watching folks should have a look see here. The cordless CO3 is still capable for day-to-day musings, especially for countless hours surfing Youtube and tapping up Michael Jackson tribute vids. It may not boast the flexibilities of it's more talented siblings but heck, we're in an economic downturn, no?
